COUNTY OFFERS WORKSHOP ON ENFORCEMENT OF AIR QUALITY RULES
Class Targets Fugitive Dust From Construction

(Phoenix)— Maricopa County takes dust control very seriously, imposing tough rules and a vigorous enforcement policy for dust violators. On October 10, the Maricopa County Environmental Services Department is offering a class for the construction industry about the enforcement process for fugitive dust violations from construction.

The free interactive class will follow the enforcement process from start to finish, with discussions on site inspections, types of violations, and enforcement actions.

“Hopefully some of these construction sites can avoid future violations and enforcement actions if they better understand what our inspectors are looking for and how the whole system works,” said Steven Peplau, Air Quality Division Manager.
